

ARCHAEOLOGY

Contemporary archaeology studies the origins and growth of basic human institutions. It produces results of importance to researchers in many fields and involves the work of diverse academic areas. Recognizing these broad links, the archaeology minor gives students from diverse disciplinary backgrounds the opportunity to learn the approaches of contemporary archaeology. Develop academic strengths that will prepare you for advanced training and careers in the array of fields that make use of archaeological data and methods.

Experiences and Opportunities

The anthropology student organization, AnthroGroup, is a great source of information on department activities and a good way to meet other anthropologists. AnthroGroup publishes the Nebraska Anthropologist and meets regularly throughout the year.

Education abroad opportunities allow you to further your understanding of archaeology while gaining real world experience.

DIGITAL HUMANITIES

The minor offers a wide range of courses, allowing you to explore how digital technologies alter our understanding of ourselves, our art, our history, and our culture. Learn how to engage critically with digital media through courses that introduce you to digital techniques for research, analysis, and publication. Gain experience with hands-on, creative digital work, and design and build digital projects independently and with teams of other students. The wide range of electives combined with a variety of special topics options allow you to choose courses that speak to your interests.
